

WOMAN AND SON ARE UNITED BY THE TIMES

Picture Published in Paper Serves to Bring Mother to Former Army Nurse.

"Mother is alive and well, and she is preparing to come to Washington for a little reunion, and I have to thank the Washington Times for being the medium through which this will be made possible," gratefully stated Lawrence A. Woodring today in telling how a photograph used by the Times in January was recognized as that of her son by Mrs. Harriet Woodring in Baker City, Ore.

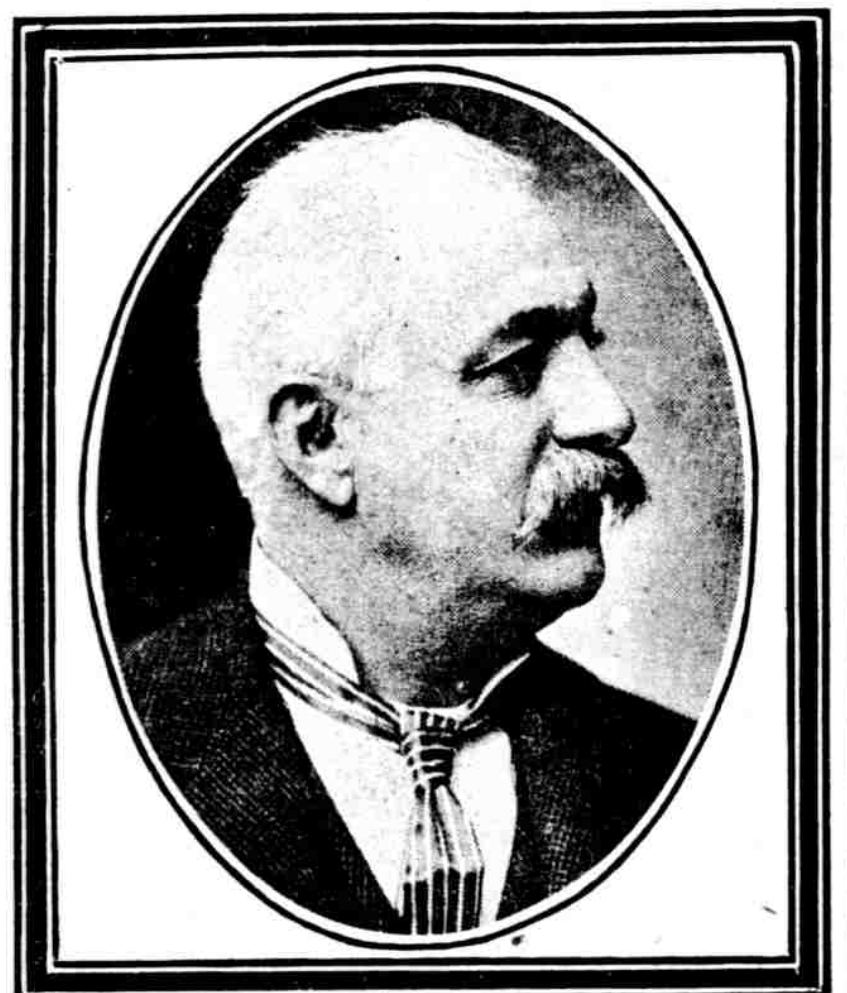

Woodring is a Spanish-American war veteran, who in a fit of despondency on December 3 attempted suicide by taking bichloride of mercury. He was saved from death by prompt action of the physicians of Emergency Hospital. Later he was added by the hospital mission, and procured a position as a nurse in the soldiers' home at Hampton Roads, Va. He returned to Washington today, and expects to get employment in a local hospital.

When I came back from the Philippines, where I was a nurse in the army," said Woodring, "I stopped in Tyrone, Pa., to see my mother, brother, and sisters. I was told by an aunt that they had perished in the Austin flood. I came on to Washington, and after being refused employment because I was unable to speak distinctly, I decided to end it all with bichloride. I failed, and now that the Times has brought me the good news that my mother is living, and well, I am doubly glad of it. I'll never forget the Times."

Woodring recovered his power of speech after successfully combating the effects of the bichloride, and shortly after his recovery he gave The Washington Times an exclusive story of his experiences as an army nurse in the Philippines and during the Boxer uprising in China. It was in connection with that story that his picture which served to bring news of his mother, was used.

COL. W. C. HASKELL, Late Superintendent of Markets, Who Died Early This Morning.

Markets Director Collapses Quickly

Col. W. C. Haskell, superintendent of weights, measures, and markets, died this morning at his home in the Cumberland apartment, fourteenth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Apparently in good health, Colonel Haskell attended to his duties in the District building yesterday. Returning to his home, he complained after dinner of feeling ill. Dr. J. Law Thompson was summoned, and remained with him until the end. His condition rapidly became worse, and he died at 6:15 a. m. Dr. Thompson pronounced death due to an acute attack of kidney trouble.

Colonel Haskell was born in Ridgeville, Ohio, July 24, 1845, was educated in the public and private schools of Ashabula, Ohio, where, later he engaged in the wood and lumber business. He was elected mayor of the town in 1887, serving until 1889. Colonel Haskell was a lieutenant colonel in the Tenth Ohio volunteer militia, and, in 1889, was appointed chief of engineers, with the rank of colonel, on the staff of Governor Foraker.

From 1892 until 1896, he was United States marshal for the northern district of Ohio, and on August 1, 1901, was appointed superintendent of weights and measures of the District, the title of the office being changed later to superintendent of weights, measures, and markets.

Colonel Haskell leaves a wife, three sons, John M. Haskell, of Albany, N. Y.; Douglas Haskell, of Cleveland; and Jacob Haskell, of Ashabula, and one daughter, Mrs. R. D. Lamson, of Jefferson, Ohio. Mrs. Haskell is at present visiting her daughter.

Universal regret was expressed by officials and employees of the District at the death of Colonel Haskell, who was regarded as one of the most efficient and able in the service of the local government.

Colonel Haskell was an ambitious and painstaking official, said Commissioner Siddons. "His death is a distinct loss to the District. Funeral arrangements will be made this afternoon. The body probably will be sent to Ohio for interment."

ROOSEVELT'S RETURN STARTS 916 GOSSIP

Bryan's Intimates Expect to See Him Candidate for Democratic Nomination.

The prospective early return to this country of Col. Theodore Roosevelt has set the tongues of the political gossips, not merely going, but humming. As the Colonel nears the shores of his native land, it may be expected that the talk, vigorous as it is now, will be accelerated.

Not alone does the talk concern the political fortunes of the Colonel and whether he will be a candidate in 1916, but it concerns the Democratic situation, also. In this connection, there is a most entertaining line of speculation about the plans of Secretary William J. Bryan.

Intimates of Secretary Bryan do not believe that he has put behind him for all time an ambition to be President. On the other hand, they think he yearns to succeed Woodrow Wilson. This is borne out by his insistence on the one-term plank of the Baltimore platform and in various other ways.

Plan for Bryan Boom. In inside Bryan circles, now, they are talking about this plan of encompassing the presidency. To have Mr. Bryan stay in the Wilson Cabinet through thick and thin; to secure for him the endorsement of the Wilson Administration for the succession; and then armed with this endorsement, to secure the nomination with practically no opposition and go before the country with the plea that a united Democracy stands behind the Secretary of State.

In pondering on this plan, obviously, the Democrats have in mind the fact that Roosevelt forced the nomination of Taft on the Republican party engineer, at the time of the Cleveland campaign, and that if Bryan, if he should go before the country as an avowed and acknowledged leader of the Wilson administration, could win, it will be necessary for President Taft to eschew ambition to be a candidate again. He has given this far no sign that he intends to put himself out of the contest, and it is well-known that the men closest to him are distinctly unfriendly to Mr. Bryan and are omitting no opportunity to let the Bryan reputation, short jabs in the Bryan republic, especially if they think it will escape notice back in the crowd.

Maneuvers Grow Interesting. Folks who are not too busy in watching Mexico and baseball scruntzies politics are likely to see a lot of maneuvering with respect to the Democratic nomination in 1916, which will be worth studying.

What every Democrat in Washington is afraid of is the possibility of an amalgamation of the Bull Moose and Republican parties, with Roosevelt as the nominee on a Progressive platform.
